

Jennifer Carlson, MD

Clinical Professor, Pediatrics-Adolescent Medicine
Stanford University School of Medicine

Jennifer Carlson, MD, is a Clinical Professor of Pediatrics who is board certified in Pediatric, Adolescent Medicine, and Clinical Informatics. In her time at Stanford, she has served in a range of clinical, educational, and operational roles. Specific areas of interest and scholarship include improving health equity and access for the adolescent and young adult population through novel program development, as well as developing systemic approaches to managing health information within the EHR to allow for optimal health care for all patients. This includes ensuring that private and confidential information is protected within the electronic health record and non-private information is easily accessible to patients and families.