

Deborah Winders Davis, PhD

Professor, University of Louisville School of Medicine
Department of Pediatrics

Dr. Davis is a Professor in the Department of Pediatrics and Director of the Child and Adolescent Research Design and Support (CAHRDS) unit and the Louisville Twin Study. Her PhD is in nursing with doctoral and post-doctoral training in developmental psychology. Her current research is focused on health and developmental equity. Additional interests are early childhood development, promoting positive parenting, prevention of behavioral and mental health problems, and factors associated with risks for dementias. In addition to expertise in various areas of content, Dr. Davis has experience in planning and implementing both qualitative and quantitative studies, database development and data management, grant and manuscript preparation, and mentoring cross-disciplinary undergraduate, graduate, and post-doctoral trainees and faculty.