

Beena Kamath-Rayne, MD, MPH, FAAP

Senior Vice President, Global Health and Clinical Skills
American Academy of Pediatrics

Beena Kamath-Rayne is a neonatologist and global health professional who currently serves as the Senior Vice President, Global Health and Clinical Skills for the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP). She has worked at the AAP for 5 years and oversees the AAP's global health portfolio and clinical skills training programs, including the Neonatal Resuscitation Program (NRP). She currently practices clinical medicine through Northwestern University Feinberg School of Medicine and Children's Healthcare of Atlanta. She has over 85 publications that address a variety of topics affecting neonatal and pediatric outcomes. She has technical experience working in countries in Latin American/Caribbean, Asia and Africa on education and implementation of programs relating to maternal, newborn and child health.