

Elizabeth C. Powell, MD, MPH

Professor of Pediatrics

Northwestern University Feinberg School of Medicine

Dr. Powell is Professor of Pediatrics at the Feinberg School of Medicine at Northwestern University and a Pediatric Emergency Medicine Physician at Ann & Robert H. Lurie Children's Hospital of Chicago. Her clinical and research interests have focused on injury epidemiology and pediatric emergency medical care delivery. She has been involved in local and multi institutional collaborative research efforts focused on better understanding and improving care of febrile infants, children with traumatic brain injury, and children with gastrointestinal illness treated in the emergency department. She was a Pediatric Emergency Medicine Fellowship Director and has served as a research mentor for many fellows. She has participated in national steering committees and is involved in advocacy efforts relevant to injury prevention.